PRAYER TO CARRY TODAY

SOMEONE BROKE THE TRAIL

Some afternoons feel like wading through deep snow. Every step costs something, and you can't see firm ground anywhere, just more of the same stretching ahead.

Psalm 119:133 is a prayer for footing: "Establish my footsteps in your word." The psalmist doesn't ask for the whole road to be cleared, only that each step land somewhere solid. God's word is that solid place. It has been walked before you, and it holds weight. Where you can't see the ground, you can still put your foot where He has already stepped.

Right now, name the one next thing in front of you. Not the whole afternoon, just the next step. Take that one, and let the next one wait until you get there.

A PRAYER FOR TODAY

Lord, I'm knee-deep in this afternoon and tired of it. Show me where You've already stepped, and let Your word hold.
