PRAYER TO CARRY TODAY

HALFWAY, AND STILL HELD

By the middle of the day, the energy you started with can be gone. There's still a lot left, your hands are tired, and you don't know where the strength for the rest is coming from.

Psalm 27:14 tells you to be strong, but it says so between two calls to wait for the LORD. The strength doesn't start with you. Even let your heart take courage can be read as a promise that He strengthens your heart. David wrote this while he was being lied about and left on his own, and he held on. You are not holding the whole weight. He has the rope.

Stand up from whatever you're doing for two minutes. Open your hands, let your shoulders drop, breathe out slowly, and ask Him for the next stretch only. Then go back to it.

A PRAYER FOR TODAY

Lord, my grip is tired and the wall is still high. Hold the rope, and make me strong enough to reach.
