PRAYER TO CARRY TODAY

THE HARD SEASON IS OVER

Some mornings you wake up already braced, as if the long, hard season will never end: the strain, the waiting, the weight you've carried for months.

Isaiah 40 begins at the end of exactly that kind of season. God's people had spent years in exile, and His first words to them are not a lecture but comfort: "Comfort, comfort my people." He tells His messengers to speak to her heart: her hard service is over, her sin is pardoned. He isn't waiting at the gate with a list. He's waiting with open arms.

Before you start today, tell Him the season you're tired of. Then step into the day expecting His comfort, not another battle.
