PRAYER TO CARRY TODAY

TODAY GOT LOUD.

LOVE GETS THE LAST WORD.

Lord, I was loud today. Let love speak last.

"If I speak with the languages of men and of angels, but don't have love, I have become sounding brass or a clanging cymbal."

NOISE ISN'T THE ENDING

Some days get louder than you meant them to. A reply came out sharp, a conversation turned into point-scoring, and now the house is quiet and you're replaying every word. That ache is real, and it shows how much you care about the person on the other end.

Paul wrote this line about himself: brilliant words without love become clanging noise. He doesn't say the noise is final. The same chapter promises that love outlasts everything else. What was loud today can still be met with something gentle, and God's grace is already in the kitchen before you get there.

Before tonight ends, make one small gesture toward the person you clashed with. Make them a cup of tea, leave the light on, sit beside them for a minute. You don't need a speech. Let love have the final say.

SCRIPTURE

If I speak with the languages of men and of angels, but don’t have love, I have become sounding brass or a clanging cymbal.

A PRAYER FOR TODAY

Lord, I keep replaying what I said. Let this cup across the counter carry the love my words couldn't.
